ABOUT...

- Lynnea grew up in Monterey, where she had to navigate difficult circumstances growing up. As a child, her parents were both incarcerated, so it was difficult not having her parents around. Thankfully, her grandparents and her twin sister were always there to help her figure things out. Because of her circumstances, she always felt like she grew up faster than her peers.
- Throughout her childhood, singing was a constant in Lynnea's life. Her friends encouraged her to do open mics and the first moment she knew she had "something" was when she was at boarding school. She sang her first solo in the school auditorium, and it went so well that everyone in the crowd gave her a standing ovation. It was right then and there she knew that she wanted to pursue that same feeling over and over again on stage.
- Her sister recently encouraged her to start posting on TikTok, in order to get her name – and her music – out there. Lynnea's original song "Let Go" quickly went viral, and from there, she continued earning massive view numbers. She has even had major artists such as, Billie Eilish and Ty Dolla $ign, share her songs or comment on her videos. She says without her sister's steady encouragement and support, she doesn't know if she would have ever built a following.
- Lynnea previously had the opportunity to perform with Kelly Clarkson at a concert in Fresno. Aside from a strong TikTok following, she also has 71K Instagram followers, as well as 1.5M subscribers on YouTube.
- Lynnea has come a long way from her humble beginnings with her grandparents. While the journey has been tough, it has been a road leading her to build a resilience and drive that she carries with her to this day. While YouTube and TikTok have been great to build a steady following, she knows there is another step she needs to take. In the past, she has had to work jobs at Shake Shake and a pizza joint, to help make ends meet. Thankfully, music is now paying the bills full-time... but Lynnea is ready to break out and show the world what her sister always saw in her – a global pop star in the making.
