ABOUT...

- Francesca was born and raising in a small, rural farm town in Orange County, NY. She spent her childhood milking goats to earn her allowance, among other activities. Her father was a singer and a drummer who encouraged young Francesca to pursue music as well. She started singing in the church choir and eventually joined her school's musical theatre program. After high school, her parents encouraged her to go to college and chase a "real" career. Francesca would go on to finish college with a Broadcast Journalism degree. After graduation, she moved to NYC to pursue music. She felt as though she wasn't making progress in the Big Apple, so she swapped coasts and moved to LA, where she lives now.
- While continuing to work towards a successful music career, Francesca holds multiple jobs at any given time, just so she can scrape by and pay for recording time. She considers her music to be a blend of R&B and pop and writes her music based on her past experiences, especially her love life. Francesca is bisexual and says it was difficult divulging it to her parents when she told them she had her first girlfriend. Thankfully, they have become supportive and she knows they have her back no matter what.
- She recently released her latest single, "Stutter," to Spotify. She also have several other singles on streaming platforms as well. If Francesca could compare herself to another artist, she says she has similar energy and style of music to Summer Walker. Aside from vocals, she can also play some piano and ukulele, both instruments she has been teaching herself to play in order to become a more well-rounded artist.
- Francesca's ultimate dream is to have a massive, dedicated fanbase who knows every word to every one of her songs. She wants to perform interactive, intimate shows and build a relationship with each audience. Her biggest motivators are her parents, as she wants to prove to them that her sacrifices and hard work have all been worth it.
