ABOUT...

- Grant, a Dallas native, spent the first 15 years of his life in Texas. Growing up, he fell in love with singing and dancing from an early age, something his parents fully supported. He started taking dance lessons at 7-years-old, quickly becoming versed in Jazz, Ballet, Hip-Hop and more. He soon became passionate about music as well, even teaching himself to play all of Adele's songs on the piano.
- In 2013, when Grant was 10-years-old, his mom took him to an audition for the touring show, Kidz Bop. Grant ended up landing a coveted spot as one of the original four Kidz Bop kids. For the next four years, he was a full-time Kidz Bop kid, an opportunity which he used to learn the ins and outs of the music business.
- In 2016, Grant decided to part ways with Kidz Bop, in order to form his own identity and work on his own music. Since then, he has been busy continuing to hone his skills, releasing several singles and a debut EP along the way. He also performs live whenever he has the chance (and his brother usually plays drums at his shows).
- When it comes to social media, Grant has learned to use it to his advantage. He considers himself a TikTok "OG" in that he was on the app since before it was TikTok (when it was Musical.y).
- Grant's biggest challenge in becoming a pop music sensation has been landing the right exposure to help elevate him to the next level. He works tirelessly at his craft and funds everything on his own. When it boils down to it, Grant is ready and willing to do whatever it takes to launch his career to another stratosphere.
