ABOUT...

- Jada is a Dallas native who started singing at 3-years-old in her church youth choir. She comes from a large family and is the middle of 3 siblings. Her mom has always been her biggest fan – and her biggest critic. As a singer herself, Jada’s mom played the keys in a jazz band. When Jada was 11-years-old, she recorded her first album with her cousins, as they were in a girl group together at the time. In fact, she went to a performing arts high school, before going on to college to study Musical Theatre.
- Since finishing college last year, Jada has been writing and recording new music non-stop and is aiming to release her debut solo EP early next year. She says her music is “chill with an R&B vibe to it.” Thematically, it reflects her own life, from breakups and heartache to situations she sees her friends involved in.
- On TikTok, Jada currently has 15K followers and counting. She loves using the platform to show off her personality by posting singing videos, voiceovers, dance videos and music video clips. Her ultimate dream in the industry is to be successful enough to make a living off music and enjoy herself while doing it.
- At the moment, her biggest obstacle is the lack of resources – whether it’s financial resources or simply knowing the right people to help get her in the door. Jada also sees other 20-somethings on social media with successful careers and making money through their platforms, while she is still living at home and grinding to reach her goals. This has created added pressure to “make it,” but Jada knows her time will come (and all the hard work will one day pay off).
